

This article was originally published here

By Caitlin Crawshaw — With typical charm, you nailed the interview and snagged the job offer — a beautiful opportunity for a recent grad. But before you start salivating at the prospect of a corner cubicle, there's something you should know: The game isn't over. You're still selling yourself, and the most crucial part is yet to come. Job offer in hand, you have a decision to make: is this the deal...